I have lunch with my son every Monday at his school. Two Mondays ago she sat with us during lunch and ate a baked potato. I had never met her so I asked her name and if she had made many friends because she was new. She told me she had and continued picking at that potato. I remember thinking how beautiful her eyes were and what a cute little girl she was. Later on I saw her running around in the playground. That is my one memory of this sweet little girl and even though I met her only briefly her passing has left a hole in our family's hearts. She was my son's classmate and she is deeply missed by all the kids in school.
