Dennis went back to school for three years at Berkeley University for Classical Homeopathy and practiced from 1991 to 2000 in Denver, CO. When Dennis decided to semi-retire, he returned to Fort Collins in the year 2000. He had a love for exploration and life. Dennis got his pilot's license at age 17, enjoyed rock climbing and was an avid skier - which is what brought him to Colorado. He had a strong love for golf and joined the Fort Collins Country Club where he met friends which he considered his 2nd family. Dennis dedicated his life to the service of others which was the underlying drive in his life.

“ Jan- Life does present some regrets... and one of mine is not reconnecting with you and Dennis about 15 years ago. As so many have stated, Dennis was a man of character and quiet confidence and grace. I don't doubt, tho, that he would have happily sliced and diced me on the golf course!! (-: Take genuine solace in the true and valued memories you have. Dave Brown

“ Dennis was a great guy. He was helpful on health questions and was a very good golfer. We played as partners in several golf events and he ran the Saturday golf group.

The golf group plays various games with team and individual winners. One Saturday Dennis had a game that was so complicated he said to just play and he would tell us who won later. We all remember this as very funny.

We missed him when he stopped golf and miss him more even now.

“ I am devastated to learn of my friend and doctor's death. Dennis has taken care of me for 15 years and saved me from more difficulties than I can count. I'll miss his perspective on life, his great laugh and loving stories about his wife Jan. He loved his family and told me personal stories to help me gain an alternative view on wherever I was stuck. I hope as a family you find solace in knowing what a good, kind, loving and generous man he was, doctor's degree or not. He was a wonderful human being. He deeply cared about others and did whatever he could to help. RIP Dennis. You will be sorely missed. Gwenn Correll

“ Dear Jan, Leanne & I were very saddened to learn of Dennis's passing. I had the privilege of playing golf with Dennis on many occasions at the FC Country Club Tuesday-Thursday golf group. I especially enjoyed playing when paired with Dennis as he was always a true gentleman and a pleasure to have as a playing partner.
