After the girls left home she turned to quilting, creating special quilts for all of the children and grandchildren. Gertrude had a quick wit and a natural ability to write, which was proven when a story of hers was published in Reader's Digest "Laughter is the Best Medicine".

Gert and Bob moved to Fort Collins, Colorado to live closer to their children after his retirement in 1988. They were active with the Fort Collins Corral of Westerners International and formed many deep friendships.
