“ Luke, my friend, you will be missed by all your CLPJHS friends. Never have I worked with a person with such high standards of keeping our building sparkling. He would stand at the front of a row of desks and straighten them, until they were perfect. He never denied me when I asked for something, even as silly as attaching John Elway posters to the ceiling of my classroom to prevent students from marring them. :) We shared stories, consoled each other, and laughed often about everything. After I retired, he delivered a piece of furniture to my home. We sat on the deck, drank a beer and reminisced. I loved Luke and hope his retirement was filled with fun times with his sons. xoxoxox Jan Carpenter
